Abolish The Tip

A certain class of Americans are nutty on the subject of tipping. They are not only nutty, but they are a nuisance to the rest of mankind.

The tip is an established institution in many of the old countries, but they use their brains as well as their money. Where an American would tip a quarter or a half dollar, the foreigner in his own country would hand over one or two cents. And they get just as much for their copper as the splurger does for his silver.

There ought to be a federal law forbidding tipping of every nature and fixing a jail sentence for both the giver and the receiver.

When a man goes into a hotel and registers he expects to pay the proprietor the established price of his board and lodging. He should not be required to pay also the waiter, and the chambermaid, and the elevator man, and the bellhop in order to secure the attention and service to which every guest is entitled.

Tipping is degrading, to both the giver and the receiver.

It should be abolished by law, since so many do not possess either the brains or the nerve to abolish it by custom.

Free advice is seldom worth its cost.

Keep moving, or the world will run off and leave you.

'Tis fortunate our neighbors never know us as we are. It saves us a lot of unnecessary worry.

WHAT SHE FOUND

By NETTIE B. FANNING

Two days before the midwinter banquet of the Greenville Literary society, Mrs. Fleming was finishing the doilette gown which she had planned to wear on that occasion. It was before the time of backless bodices and she was afraid she had been almost too daring in planning that kind of a gown when most of the ladies would wear a "V" neck, and their long-sleeved "undies" would probably show through their chiffon or crepe de chine sleeves.

Although not fashionable as to clothes, the club was very exclusive, and so old that its charter members had grown white-haired or bald-headed, according to their respective sex. It was composed of doctors, lawyers, ministers and their wives, school teachers of varying ages and a few others. Mrs. Fleming was one of the others. There were two bachelors, Mr. Black and Mr. Tilden, the always immaculate principal of the grammar school, thirty-five, pink-cheeked and six feet two.

Young Mrs. Fleming sighed as she sewed. She wished she could do something to wake up the club. They were too snug and complacent. They had had the same president for 15 years.

A telephone call interrupted Mrs. Fleming's musings. It was the chairman of the banquet committee, who said that Mrs. Worton would be unable to be at the banquet and would Mrs. Fleming please fill in her place on the program.

Mrs. Fleming promised to see what she could do, put on her things and started for the library. On her way she met Miss Davids, a club member, and stopped to chat with her. As they parted a few torn scraps of paper slipped unnoticed from Miss Davids' notebook and fell at Mrs. Fleming's feet. She looked down at them, then picked them up, tucked them into her purse and hastily turned toward home, where she spent some time in neatly patching the pieces together, picture puzzle fashion.

Two nights later the banquet progressed from fruit cocktails to demitasse. Then the tables were cleared and speeches were in order.

When Mrs. Fleming was called on she arose, looked steadily at Mr. Tilden until he blushed, then unfolded a disreputable looking paper, laid it on the table face down and began gravely:

"Two days ago I started for the library to search for something to read tonight, little thinking that I would soon be unravelling a baffling mystery concerning three of our prominent club members. To say that I have been alternately interested, curious, astonished and shocked at what I have learned, faintly expressed my emotions. Before reaching the library I stopped to chat a moment with Miss Davids. After we parted I noticed some bits of paper on the walk. They must have fallen from her notebook as we were talking. On one of the pieces I saw the words, 'exceedingly shocking'."

Miss Davids' face showed blank amazement. Mrs. Fleming continued: "Now, anything shocking is apt to be interesting, particularly if it concerns those with whom one is well acquainted."

Several people stirred uneasily in their seats.

"It chanced that other bits of paper had fallen, with the writing up. After a hasty glance I simply had to know what it all meant, and gathered up the papers. You will begin to understand why I did this when I repeat to you the words I saw in the order in which I first saw them on the ground. 'EXCEEDINGLY SHOCKING—TILDEN—ROCKING—MISS PENNY—OPEN—WORKED STOCKING—MISS ROSS—SAD.'"

Her audience was now listening breathlessly, and consternation showed in the faces of the two middle-aged school-teachers mentioned. Mrs. Fleming went on:

"There were other scraps with words on them. After gathering them up I at once returned home and spent the afternoon in piecing them together."

She looked soberly at the paper on the table and all eyes followed her gaze.

"I thought at first I would say nothing about it; but as the matter so intimately concerns us all, I felt that you, too, should be told. Every eye was fixed upon her as she took the paper from the table."

"Listen," she said. "Could anything be more dreadful than this?"

Miss Ross turned to Miss Penny, white flushing. "You sure it's exceedingly shocking—indeed, it is!"

"But Tilden, poor fellow, he was not an openworked stocking!"

"Pretty clever," murmured the judge. "Mrs. Fleming, are you not at home?"

"You certainly had our undies at tonight all right."

"Someone also must have dropped those papers. I never wrote that," said Miss Davids, a bit anxiously.

"Isn't that your writing?" Mrs. Fleming smiled innocently and handed the paper to her. Though elaborately steered together, it was blank on both sides.

Retirement.

"Do you not sometimes dream," said the sympathetic friend, "of dismissing all official cares and leading your life your own way?"

"That isn't a dream," said Senator Serghum, a little irascibly. "That's a nightmare."

A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. Lancaster people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. D. C. Sandes, prop. lumber and coal business of Campbell St., endorsed Doan's four years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

"I used Doan's Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and I am glad to endorse them," says Mr. Sandes. "When my kidneys got out of order I have a dull, nagging backache and a soreness through my kidneys. My kidneys act irregularly, too. Doan's Kidney Pills from Stormes Drug Store relieve the trouble and put my kidneys in good order." (Statement given Nov. 11, 1916)

On Feb. 24, 1921, Mr. Sandes added: "I have the same opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills as when I endorsed them in 1916. I am glad to recommend Doan's to anyone for they are very reliable."

A number of our boys and girls contemplate entering the Pig Club this season. Every child should have the opportunity and encouragement that such organizations offer to our youngsters. Such work makes proper development and training of our youth and fosters a love for farm life in their hearts that hold them to the farms as nothing else can.

WHEN you look at a 30 x 3 1/2 USCO at $10.90 think back for a minute as far as you can remember USCO.

The truth is that men have always found USCO an outstanding money's worth no matter what its price.

Today at $10.90 USCO maintains its established standard of quality.

And because of the new price, it sets a new index of tire value.

Men who have used USCO have never been inclined to measure its value by the general run of tires.
